About Swat

Swat (Switzerland of Pakistan) is a large district of Malakand Division, Khyber Pakhtunkhwa. The valley was a major centre of Gandhara civilization under the ancient kingdom of Gandhara until 10th century, after which the area became largely a Muslim abode. Until 1969 Swat was an independent state and then merged with Pakistan. The average elevation of Swat is (3220 ft) having considerable cooler climate as compared to rest of the areas of Pakistan. This area containing lush forests, alpine meadows and snow-capped mountains which makes Swat as one of the famous tourists' destinations of the country.
